

The struggle is hard, but has it seems useless to fight for a desperate cause, more and more people are undergoing injustices and repression around the globe forcing them to gather to protect their own freedom as individuals.

The cause is noble, and although unity has a strong meaning, the people have never been so fragmented and forced to make binary choices in the promise than one of these actors would convey one's ideologies.

It's a lack of retrospectives regarding history to think that outnumbering an opponent lead to successful and peaceful movements as freedom of speech seems threaten at the scale of every individuals.

It's a lack of knowledge to keep thinking that we still have the power and freedom to act when our condition is reduced to binary choices by the so called leaders of the free world preaching democracy in the name of religious ideologies therefore economical interests.

Indeed it's by joining any of these cause that one's free will is dissolved as an individual. The honest citizen didn't ponder any other possibilities and this emphasizes a lack of freedom and knowledge that the opponent may use as tool against democracy, against your own liberties, against human rights, against you. As the administration buys our aspirations and ideologies by trading our own confort, billionaires and extremists are using us as the tool of their own revolutions and gathering in the name of a cause is a threat to civilizations worldwide.

Between the destructions of ecosystems holding the unique ressources that keeps us alive, the rise of military power globally through AI and money, it has never been so dangerous to trade our liberty thinking that as individuals we cannot change things nor change our way of thinking.

On the other hand relying on well known ideologies proven to work over time is nowadays just repeating the same mistakes over and over while we did not realize what was at stake.

Although standardization helps us to create better communication between society and individuals it lacks critical elements such as atypical and critical thinking which would have offer us opportunities beyond a single and binary choice.

Although chaos is scaring, it's by making its experience that the human mind is pushed to its limits and brake boundaries to find solutions in a desperate cause and it's not too late to break free from the lace that seems to become tighter and tighter.

Chaos is misunderstood outside of the fields of sciences and no one is willing a collective chaos by his own will.

Chaos gives information regarding the state of a system reaching is maximum entropy, a system based on an infinite growth in the infinite place such as our universe and our planet with limited ressources.

It might be the last struggle of a dying system and following patterns in the name of freedom and collectivity is misguiding our own interests as individuals. The response to large scale threat cannot be violence and the opponent aware of that will have a form of superiority regardless if they are outnumbered as technology and knowledge gives unprecedented power to people while the rest of us is just still believing in magics.

It's a first call to soft activism in the form of an artistic movement to educate, raise awareness and train our mind through creativity and the endless possibilities of beings capable to bring their own thoughts to life.

True honest education is the key but how can you look your own children in the eyes while promising that all is gonna be okay. At the end you just assuming your own ignorance in the form of reassuring sayings but you did not even consider that this child had already more perspectives that the inner child that inhabits you and by projecting your fears you may have already stolen his liberty still believing that you doing that in the name of his own good? Instead of projecting your own fears let them experience a form of despair while being a spark in the darkness a guide to follow and your child may already have enough creative resources to save you along the way.
